We will do an exegesis, reflection and exposition of Psalm 1. I call Psalm 1 the Wicket Gate into the Psalter. Entering into Psalms is like comparing our life to Pilgrim's Progress – we are strangers on the earth and our lives consist of a journey. Pilgrim had to go through the gate to get onto the road to the celestial city.

Haddon Robinson put it this way, “Exposition is drawing from your exegesis to give your people what they need to understand the passage.” This implies that the preacher will have a lot more material after the exegesis than they are able to present in the sermon. Here are three implications for us to ponder: 1.

Romans 12:2. Romans 12:1. [I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, &c.] The apostle having finished the doctrinal part of this epistle, proceeds to that which is more practical; and enforces the several duties of religion, upon the principles he had before laid down, a method generally observed by him in all his epistles. The illative particle "therefore", shows that the following exhortations are so many conclusions, consequences, and inferences, deduced from what had been ...
