As Lacan advises, we have to "distinguish love as an imaginary passion from the active gift which it constitutes on the symbolic plane" (Seminar I, p.276, my italics). That said, a condition of love is that these symbolic relations be subverted. Love entails what Lacan calls a "veritable subduction of the symbolic" (Seminar I, p.142). We should hear in this term 'subduction' its geological resonance - the pushing of one tectonic plate under another in the force their collision.

Bruce Fink, Lacan on Love: An Exploration of Lacan's Seminar VIII, Transference, Polity Press, 2016, pp. 253. Bruce Fink's Lacan on Love: An Exploration of Lacan's Seminar VIII, Transference posits its aim as an exposition of love in Freud's and Lacan's works. Fink states at the beginning of the book that it is impossible to find a singular theory of love in their works, so what he does in the book is to deal with their multiple attempts to discuss this complex human experience.
